

LANSEAL ACADEMY OFFERS FREE COMBAT SESSION

The military academy in Lanseal is ramping up to recruit more cadets this year due to what many perceive as domestic terrorism initiated by the rebel forces. According to one recruiting instructor, the academy is currently projecting to draft about 30 to 40 freshmen this year to fulfill the institution's long term and short term goals. To efficiently recruit the right people, the academy have decided to offer free training sessions to Gallian citizens who are ages 15 and older. Instructor Rodriguez claims that the program not only finds suitable candidates, but also builds awareness of our nation's political conflicts, and teaches younger men and women the fundamentals that might serve them well to defend their home towns against aggressive rebels.

The demo version of Valkyria Chronicles™ II is available at the PlayStation®Store. Note that you must have a valid PlayStation®Network account to download the data.

Quick Offense from Lanseal

Avan Hardins is a freshmen who just enrolled at Lanseal Academy this year. His career path could have been completely different, if his brother was never reported deceased by the academy. With only a single piece of paper proving his beloved brother's death, Avan decided to enter Lanseal, in search of the truth. One day was all it took for Avan and the rest of the new freshmen to understand why the cadets at Lanseal could so easily lose their lives.

When the bells of Lanseal tolls, it is now mandatory to take part in a mission that is assigned to your class at academy. Avan the leader of Class G, and his squad must be ready to stop the rebels day or night. The rebels are quickly gaining funds and believers to support their campaign, and this means that the cadets at Lanseal must immediately practice what they learned in class, if they want to survive this year's program.
